Can Ideals of Freedom Support Informed Consent?

Is there a universal moral duty of doctors to obtain informed consent? Professor Costa examines whether this requirement can be vindicated by appeal to the value of freedom.

Victoria Costa received her PhD in Philosophy from the National University of La Plata, Argentina, in 2003. She is an associate professor of philosophy at the College of William and Mary and has authored the book Rawls, Citizenship, and Education, as well as articles in political philosophy, applied ethics and civic education.
